

WORKERS COMPENSATION

JobKeeper Payments

The table below summarises the position of each State or Territory authority with examples for each scenario, the amount to be declared as wages for Workers Compensation purposes and coverage implications. We recommend that you follow the links to your relevant state or territory for full details (click on the name of each jurisdiction to visit their website), view the information on our website HERE, or speak to your allinsure adviser for further information.

	Australian Capital Territory	New South Wales	Northern Territory	Queensland	South Australia	Tasmania	Victoria	Western Australia
Category	Employee stood down without pay		Employee still working and currently earning a wage of more than $1,500 per fortnight		Employee still working and currently earning exactly $1,500 per fortnight		Employee still working and currently earning a wage of less than $1,500 per fortnight
Example	Employee does not receive pay		Employee earns $2,500 per fortnight		Employee earns $1,500 per fortnight		Employee earns $500 per fortnight
Employer Obligation to access JobKeeper payment scheme	Employer pays employee $1,500 per fortnight (top-up payment)		Employer pays employee current wage of $2,500 The employer receives the JobKeeper subsidy of $1,500		Employer pays employee current wage of $1,500 The employer receives the JobKeeper subsidy of $1,500		Employer pays employee $1,500 per fortnight including: 1. Current wage of $500 per fortnight 2. $1,000 necessary to top-up the employee to $1,500 per fortnight (top-up payment)
Risk Implications	Employee is not considered to be working and not covered for workers compensation		Employee considered to be covered for workers compensation		Employee considered to be covered for workers compensation		Employee considered to be covered for workers compensation
Amount Declarable for Workers Compensation purposes (as per each State and Territory's Workers Compensation Act)
Australian Capital Territory	Nil declarable		$2,500		$1,500		$500
New South Wales	Nil declarable		$2,500		$1,500		$500
Northern Territory	Nil declarable		$2,500		$1,500		$500
Queensland	Nil declarable		$2,500		$1,500		$500
South Australia*	Nil declarable*		$1,000*		Nil declarable*		Nil declarable*
Tasmania	Nil declarable		$2,500		$1,500		$500
Victoria	Nil declarable		$2,500		$1,500		$500
Western Australia	Nil declarable		$2,500		$1,500		$500

*The declared amount for Employers in South Australia will be the total of all payments made to workers during the period less the total amount of JobKeeper payments received. Full details can be found at the ReturnToWorkSA site in the link above.